

Imagine if you couldn't read after dark or stay up late to study for tomorrow's test. That's the reality for 3 million kids like you living in South Africa. You can change that and add to your community service credits in the process.

CHANGING LIVES ONE LIGHT AT A TIME

Your contribution will:

- Enable village children to study in evening hours and complete their homework with ease.
- Alleviate health and safety issues (associated with kerosene lights) for families.
- Enhance self-confidence within students (especially for orphaned children).
- Reduce rates of school absenteeism and improve academic performance.
- Free up family resources to buy food, medicine and fulfill other household needs.

Since 1994, Project People Foundation (PPF), a US-based non-profit organization, has empowered low-income South African women and youth with opportunities to attain a quality education, create a sustainable livelihood, and achieve financial independence.

*PPF's Bundles of Brightness program partners with rural African schools to strengthen self-esteem, bring hope, provide renewable solar energy, and improve academic performance.

A Bundle of Brightness includes: a portable solar lantern, book bag, school uniform, socks, shoes and underwear.
